St John's Wood

In artistic circles it is a fairly historic house. It is one of the original Victorian artist studios in St John's Wood dating back to 1862.

It was designed and used by one of the seven original members of "The St John's Wood Clique" – a group of artists recognized at that time, by press and public, as a new force in the world of art.

The house featured a striking double volume north facing studio room, which was simply stunning, as well as a bedroom, bathroom and beautiful rear garden.

It was discreetly situated being behind a private path at the rear of a Victorian villa off Abbey Road. In fact, to add to its artistic heritage the garden backs onto EMI Abbey Road recording studios.

The house was not on the open market.
